City repairs last wooden alleyway with asphalt

Historic. The Streets Department says Camac Street could be this way for quite some time.

Camac Street in Center City is a historic wood-block street. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Tiny Camac Street, between 12th and 13th streets, is little wider than an alley in Center City, but one block between Locust and Walnut has the distinction of being the only stretch of city street paved with wooden blocks.

The paving system is historically protected, and much beloved by residents who take a certain pleasure in its nearly useless charm.

Somebody dropped a fresh patch of asphalt over some of it. What's going on?

That somebody was the city's Streets Department, whose representatives said Tuesday that's the way it's gonna be for a while.

The city has to find someone to sell them wooden blocks.

"The current project is an interim repair because of the extensive deterioration of the street," said Streets Department spokeswoman June Cantor.

Reasons for using wood

The wood-paved stretch of Camac Street was paved with wood because the little alley was once lined with genteel clubs whose clients were annoyed with the noise of horse hooves on cobblestone. Miles of Philadelphia — and in other cities — were lined with wood.

Over time, the blocks tended to absorb the stench of horse urine and fell into disfavor. They deteriorated rapidly with the advent of cars.

The city, over time, removed them, until Camac Street was last. A major reconstruction was done in 1998, and again in 2008. In 2012, the city patched the street, apparently with the last of its 4-by-4 oak blocks.

"We used wooden blocks that we left in inventory from the last major reconstruction," Cantor said.

Though the Streets Department dropped asphalt over a portion of the street, a 30-foot section of newish wooden pavers remained uncovered on Tuesday. Closer to Walnut Street, deteriorated blocks crumbled under foot.

Difficult to repair

The Streets Department needs to solve two big problems before repaving Camac with wood: finding appropriate blocks and finding a way to preserve them.

It took the city more than a year to find blocks dense enough to serve as a paving material back in 1998, according to an article in The Philadelphia Inquirer from that era.

"Due to the "rarity" of wood-block streets, there is no known product that is designed for this specific application," Cantor said.

Wooden solutions

Then there's another issue: The Historical Commission wants to restore the Camac according to the earliest possible data. That means using white oak, rectangular wood pavers that stretch 4 inches by 8 inches.

Cantor said the Streets Department got seven years out of the last batch of blocks, and that's consistent with what they've seen in other cities. But because the underbelly of the street is lined with concrete, the crews have drilled holes in hopes of wicking water away fast enough to minimize rot.

While older blocks installed at the turn of the century were soaked in creosote, a product that is no longer available for use., the Streets Department is now experimenting with other wood preservatives.

Gamble. Racism claims cited at Live! casino hearing

A rendering of the casino
PROVIDED

Activists said that the Live! Hotel and Casino project shouldn't go forward if allegations of racism against the developer are sustained.

Pamela Peebles, chair of the Pennsylvania chapter of the National Action Network (NAN), raised the objection during a City Planning Commission hearing on the project — citing lawsuits accusing Cordish Companies casinos in Kentucky, Kansas and Missouri of racially discriminatory practices.

These practices allegedly ranged from hiring a white man known as a "rabbit" to start arguments with black customers to get them ejected, to instituting dress codes banning sagging pants and very long shirts, purportedly to bar minority guests.

"We can't have a company coming in in 2015 and being discriminatory against people of color," Peebles said.

Peebles said NAN would release a report in two weeks about the validity of the allegations of racism.

Zed Smith, Cordish's chief operating officer, told Peebles there was "misinformation" going around and said he would contact NAN, but declined to talk to media.

Fattah declares his innocence in court

U.S. Rep. Chaka Fattah, made his first court appearance on Tuesday, proclaiming his innocence on corruption charges early and often during a brief hearing.

Fattah is accused of accepting bribes, using federal funds to repay campaign debts and using campaign contributions to pay his son's student loan debts.

Fattah exits court
CHARLES MOSTOLLER

"You understand that you don't have to say anything?" U.S. Magistrate Timothy Rice said at the beginning of the arraignment.

"I would like to say that I'm not guilty," Fattah said.

"We haven't gotten there yet," Rice replied.

Fattah went on to plead not guilty at the appropriate time.

"The contract I have with my community, the warranty's still good," Fattah said outside of court. "I would never do anything to embarrass them."

Two police officers from West Philly became the national face of police work when they were picked for the cover of the latest issue of Time magazine.

That's a good thing to 19th District Capt. Joseph Bologna, who said the coverage was an "honor."

"This was a great opportunity for some folks to come in independently and give them the recognition they deserve," Bologna said.

Bologna said writer Karl Vick and photographer Natalie Keyssar vested up with officers and spent 16- to 17-hour days following them on duty during several weeks in July.

The article, "What It's Like to Be a Cop in America," was timed to coincide with the one-year anniversary of Ferguson, Missouri.

Temple University criminal justice professor Joseph Alkus said the department's efforts to improve performance, specifically through a Department of Justice review requested by Commissioner Charles Ramsey, made it a good choice for a national perspective on policing.

"Unlike other places like Ferguson, that review was asked for by Commissioner Ramsey. That is a sign of leadership," Alkus said.

But activist Asa Khalif said the department still has problems.

"We can't just look at Time magazine and say, 'We're good.' We're not good at all, and we won't be good until police start treating black and brown and poor people fairly," Khalif said.

Bologna said police are trying to learn while doing their jobs.

"Good comes out of crisis if we learned something from it. ... Let's dissect it and talk about 'How can we get better?'" he said.

"My guys and girls, they're taking action. It's in them. No matter what the climate is around the country, they're gonna answer the call."

Democratic Senator Menendez announces opposition to Iran deal

Revise. He urged the Obama administration to go back to negotiating to rework the deal.

Sen. Menendez at Seton Hall University / GETTY IMAGES

Sen. Robert Menendez issued a scathing critique of the U.S.-led international nuclear deal with Iran on Tuesday and became the second senior lawmaker from President Barack Obama's own party to announce he would vote to kill the pact with Tehran.

Defying Obama and many other fellow Democrats, Menendez said in a speech in his home state of New Jersey: "I will vote to disapprove the agreement and, if called upon, would vote to override a veto" by the president.

Quoted

"Not even one centrifuge will be destroyed under this agreement." Menendez

The Senate and House of Representatives have to vote by Sept. 17 on a "resolution of disapproval" being brought by majority Republicans aiming to sink the deal. Obama is trying to gather enough support among Democrats to sustain a veto of the resolution.

Under the agreement between six major powers and Iran, new curbs would be imposed on Tehran's nuclear program in return for easing sanctions. Iran denies it wants to make a nuclear weapon.

Earlier this month, Sen. Chuck Schumer of New York, the third-ranking Democrat in the chamber, said he would vote against the deal and would work to convince other senators to do the same, signaling deep divisions within the party.

Sen. Dick Durbin, the second-ranking Democrat, supports the deal. Democratic leader Harry Reid will declare his position when the Senate returns from recess Sept. 7, when lobbying and debate over the deal is expected to intensify. REUTERS

Rosie O'Donnell. 'My missing daughter Chelsea has been found'

Comedian Rosie O'Donnell got good news Tuesday night after tweeting that her 17-year-old daughter Chelsea went missing August 11: She has been found and is safe.

Rosie O'Donnell's teenage daughter, at the center of a reported custody dispute, went missing from her home in suburban New York, the actress said on her website earlier on Tuesday.

Rosie O'Donnell, who is currently appearing in the ABC Family television series "The Fosters," adopted the girl after allegations that her biological mother signed away the child while under the influence of drugs, and the two have been fighting over her custody, according to a report in The Daily Beast.

O'Donnell has also been involved in a custody battle with her estranged wife, Michelle Rounds, over their 2-year-old daughter Dakota. O'Donnell has three other children as well. REUTERS

1 Republican Scott Walker proposes health tax credits by age, not income

Republican presidential contender Scott Walker on Tuesday unveiled his health care plan: Repeal Obamacare and replace it with age-based tax credits that Americans could use to offset the cost of purchasing their own coverage.

Under his plan, the Wisconsin governor said he would give up to $3,000 directly to taxpayers to buy health insurance. The amount would range from $3,000 in credits for those age 50 to 64 and scale down to $900 for those age 17 and under, and go to those without health insurance from their jobs.

Walker also backed longstanding Republican health proposals to allow consumers to purchase insurance out of state, loosen restrictions on health savings accounts and reform medical malpractice lawsuits.

"This gives them a way to get an affordable health care plan," he said in a speech in Minnesota, highlighting the plan's tax credits.

Republicans have long vowed to repeal President Barack Obama's signature 2010 health care law, commonly known as Obamacare. While most of the 17 Republican presidential candidates have echoed that pledge, few have offered detailed alternatives. REUTERS

Currency. Developers split over bitcoin's future as rivals emerge

A power struggle over the future of bitcoin is dividing its lead developers, provoking a fierce debate over whether the digital currency's software should be tweaked to allow for more and speedier transactions.

Bitcoin, a web-based "cryptocurrency," provides a vehicle for moving money across the world quickly and anonymously without the need for third-party verification. That has made it attractive to all sorts of users, from drug dealers to Greeks trying to get around capital controls.

On Saturday, a rival version of the current software was released by two bitcoin big guns: Gavin Andresen, who was chosen by the currency's elusive creator, Satoshi Nakamoto, as his successor when he stepped aside in 2011, and Mike Hearn, who along with Andresen is one of five senior developers.

For months Andresen and Hearn have been locked in an argument with the other three lead programmers over whether the "blocks" in which bitcoin transactions are processed should be enlarged from their current 1 megabyte, so as to enable more than three payments to be processed per second.

The new version, which calls itself Bitcoin XT, would increase the block size to 8 megabytes, which would allow up to 24 transactions to be processed every second. That is still a fraction of the 20,000 or so that VISA can process, but would increase every year, so that bitcoin could continue to grow. REUTERS

How to save big on back-to-school shopping

Family budgeting. Tara Kuczykowski, better known as the Deal Seeking Mom, shares her tips for saving money on supplies and clothes.

With back-to-school promotions starting soon after school lets out and not stopping until the yellow buses start rolling again, it can be challenging to figure out when the real deals happen.

Reuters asked Tara Kuczykowski, a mother of five and author of the popular DealSeekingMom.com blog, for her best tips on shuffling through these deals, figuring out when to buy online — and when spending more could make sense.

Timing your shopping

"The earlier you start, the more you're going to save," Kuczykowski says. "Buy a little bit here and there. Maybe you don't need as many as the limit, but if it's a deal, get it anyway. Stock up." For instance, she says that if you can get 10 notebooks for $1 now, it makes sense to buy as many as you can. You will always be able to use a notebook, and the extras could be donated to the school to benefit less privileged children.

Figuring out the real deals

"It really pays to look at all the ads in a given week and see who has the best prices," Kuczykowski says. "Take the ads with you. You can also check online. But get the Sunday newspaper ads." Just sitting down for a few minutes and glancing at these will allow you to see what one store is charging for, say, pencils, compared with another. That could help you avoid paying more for a product at one store if you can get it cheaper elsewhere, she notes.

Where to find the best penny deals

Kuczykowski says office supply stores are the best places to find deals on index cards, ballpoint pens and school glue. They might even be priced better than online, especially if bought in large quantities.

On backpacks and the occasional splurge

"It's usually better to spend a little more on a quality backpack that's going to last than on a very inexpensive backpack advertised to get you in the store," Kuczykowski says.

Our expert says it's better to spend a little more on a quality backpack than to skimp and buy one that is going to wear out in a few months. / ISTOCK

After a cheap backpack she bought for one of her children fell apart in short order, Kuczykowski splurged four or five times the original price for Lands End backpacks that lasted through all of elementary school. "It's one of the times that quality wins out over price."

On clothing

"Take advantage of the end-of-summer clearance sales. All the short sleeves, all the shorts," she says. "It's easier to stretch those items than to buy the big fall wardrobe they're not even going to wear for a few months." REUTERS

Kourtney Kardashian is ready to love again

It's hard to get back out there after your ex-partner goes on a giant bender and starts hooking up with randos, but Kourtney Kardashian is trying to take on the dating scene again. A "source close to" Kourtney very kindly shared this news with Radar Online, saying she "is devoted to getting her body in rocking shape." Jeez, you didn't need to imply she was fat, anonymous Kourtney friend. Oh, and if you're wondering what it takes to win her eye, she is reportedly looking for a "man that has children of his own" who "doesn't drink" and who is "older than her and independently wealthy." Rich old dudes, it's finally your time to shine! Rich old dudes always have such a hard time finding love with younger, beautiful women.

Emile Hirsch got a two-week jail sentence for choking a woman

Back at Sundance in January, actor Emile Hirsch was arrested for choking Paramount Digital VP Daniele Bernfeld at a nightclub in Park City. Sentencing has now come through for the actor, who pled guilty to avoid a stronger sentence. He got a 15-day jail sentence, a $4,750 fine and 50 hours of community service. Bernfeld issued a strong statement at the sentencing, saying, in part, "Quite simply, this punishment does not fit the crime. While the Park City Police Department treated me with courtesy and respect, this plea deal meets the bare minimum required to placate the regulations of our legal system. If a violent attack in front of a roomful of witnesses can be labeled a misdemeanor and dismissed, what of women who are assaulted while alone in hallways or bathrooms, or behind the closed doors of their own homes."

What did you do for your 18th birthday? Did you, perchance, get paid $200,000 to show up at a party? Because that's just how life is for Kylie Jenner, who got that much money to appear at Beachclub in Quebec, which seems like a random location to host a Jenner. Lest you think that turning 18 is making her change her ways, Page Six reports that "Kylie was escorted to the VIP restroom to change her outfit, but decided it wasn't up to standard and asked to be taken back to her car by security and then driven 50 to 100 feet to another, evidently more suitable bathroom." We're not sure which is worse: rejecting the bathroom or needing to be driven 50 feet.

WHY EVERYONE IS SO EXCITED FOR DISNEY'S 'MOANA'

Geek Girl in Hollywood

JENNA BUSCH TAKES ON THE WAY POP CULTURE SNUBS ITS FEMALE FANS. FOR MORE COLUMNS, VISIT METRO.US/JENNA-BUSCH AS WELL AS HER SITE, LEGION OF LEIA (WWW.LEGIONOFLEIA.COM)

Dwayne Johnson introduced Disney's female-centric "Moana," due November 2016, at the D23 Expo this weekend. / GETTY IMAGES

At Disney's D23 Expo this past weekend, we saw some amazing things. What I heard people talking about more than anything, however, was "Moana" and how excited they were for the Pacific Island princess.

Why is this striking such a chord with Disney fans? Part of it is something I've talked about quite a bit. It's all about representation. It's not just having a princess who isn't white, because we've had a number of those. It's giving her and the culture you're representing the honor and research it deserves.

Even better? One of the film's directors, John Musker, told me this is not a romance. It's a coming-of-age story. Look, I love a good love story, but it's refreshing to hear that not every Disney princess has to be in love. Musker said that this is a hero's journey, a la Joseph Campbell, and that she is, indeed, a hero to her people.

It's wonderful to hear something like this being taken seriously. Anyone else weary of adorable blondes doing things adorably and accidentally adorably saving a kingdom? It sounds like we're going to get a strong, heroic lead with a story that actually respects a culture.

Wine. Drink your rosé while you can — there's a shortage looming

Drink up now, before the rosé is gone. / GETTY IMAGES

Does summer end when the rosé supply dries up? We're about to find out, Labor Day or not.

"The harvest of 2014 for Europe was notably poor due to the bad weather, so the yield from most vineyards was lower than expected for the 2015 wines," says David Noto, an Italian grower whose vineyard, Altaneve, produces sparkling rosé.

There's also some blame to spread around among importers underestimating demand, and consequently producers setting aside less stock for the U.S. market.

But we shouldn't be here at all. The demand for rosé is neither new nor sudden. For example, exports of rosé to the U.S. from Provence, France's biggest rosé-growing region, have seen double-digit growth every year since 2004, with a 29 percent increase in 2014. So why are we still facing the prospect of Black Friday-level clashes in the wine section?

It comes down to the nature of rosé.

"Rosé wines are young wines that taste their best in the year they are produced," Noto says. "For producers and importers, it is better to run out of rosé than risk that it sits on shelves for more than a year in stores or warehouses, so many intentionally limit production quantities."

Rosé is produced all over the world, so climate and yields vary widely, but according to Noto there are brighter days ahead.

"Across Europe, this year's weather is much hotter and less rainy than last year, which should equate to better harvest yield and grape quality," he says. "So the wine produced for next year's consumption should be even better than the 2015 wines."

Aries Don't count on others. You will be left in the lurch and end up looking bad. See all of your projects through to the end for the best results.

Taurus A reward is in order for the work and time you've put in. Do something you enjoy with the people you care about the most.

Gemini Challenges will keep your body in shape and your mind sharp. Follow your passion, and don't be deterred by negativity.

Cancer Concentrate on your domestic situation and finding ways to cut corners. Ask for help if you need it, but don't let others know the details.

Leo An unanticipated opportunity will come your way. Cast aside old ideas and methods and go after something new. Promote yourself.

Virgo Keep cash tucked away for emergencies. Friends will offer helpful tips and strategies that will encourage greater personal profits.

Libra You know what your strengths are, so figure out a way to maximize their use. Jumping from one project to another will result in frustration.

Scorpio Don't be afraid to reach for the stars. Know your true worth and act accordingly. If you sell yourself short, you won't get the results.

Sagittarius With your charm, you will gain favorable attention. An idea you have previously disregarded will now prove to be a good fit.

Capricorn When it comes to private matters, the less said the better. Being too open will leave you subject to gossip and criticism.

Aquarius Love and romance are encouraged. Be prepared to go the extra mile, and plan to do something special for someone you love.

Pisces Don't waste time reliving previous disappointments. To have a successful future, you need to put your efforts into what's happening. EUGENIA LAST

Location, location, location

You can't get more central than 18th and Walnut, not to mention the prestige of a Rittenhouse Square address.

Here are a few of the best spots within a block or two of the Alison:

- Pick me up: Joe's Coffee, Elixr Coffee and La Colombe
- Eat: Parc, a.kitchen and Vernick
- Nighttime: Franklin Mortgage & Investment Company, Tria Taproom and Ranstead Room

Privacy right in the middle of everything

It's no surprise that a rental like this is right on Rittenhouse Square.

MADELINE PRESLAND
@ MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

The apartments have beautiful, smooth hardwood floors.

Allan Domb's new Rittenhouse property is a rental — but you still have to be willing to commit. The shortest lease is two years.

With just 19 units, the Alison, a remodeled building at 1805 Walnut Street (above Barnes & Noble), focuses on quality over quantity. Domb says it's worth the investment for his real estate company.

"It's a boutique of 19 homes and the level of quality that went into each home is really very specialized," says Domb. "Each home is a custom home, which you typically don't find in rentals."

There are only four units per floor, emphasizing privacy. The cost of the floors, kitchens and bathrooms were approximately $100,000 per unit, Domb says — "no one spends that."

Joanne Hudson designed the interiors, which include marble walls in the bathrooms, very modern kitchens with matte lacquer cabinets and quartz counters, and hardwood floors throughout. The overall look is clean and simple.

"It's not a building that will have one-year leases and people moving constantly," says Domb. "[The apartments] are for people who want a home to live in for years. It's the nicest-quality rental housing in the city right now."

The studios and one- and two-bedroom units at the Alison range from 515 all the way up to 5,900 square feet. The currently listed one- and two-bedrooms on the building's website rent anywhere from $5,250 to $8,000.

Views are of Rittenhouse Square, the courtyard at 10 Rittenhouse or 18th Street.

Jenkins: facing Ravens 'a little bit of a break for us'

NFL. The Eagles safety also said that what the team does in practice is "harder than the game."

Jenkins is excited for joint practices with the Ravens. / GETTY IMAGES

When the Eagles take the field at the NovaCare complex for practice, it doesn't matter whether they have pads on or how long they are practicing for. The high pace and intensity is what matters.

And according to outspoken team leader Malcolm Jenkins, it's invaluable prep work for facing off against other NFL offenses.

"What we do in practice is way harder than the game," the safety said Tuesday. "We do all this stuff during the week and we want to be able to take it out and compete on game days — that's the fun part."

After their Sunday preseason win over the Colts and a players day off Monday, the Birds took things (relatively) easy Tuesday, working without pads and for only one hour in front of some fans and media members. The light-work day is in advance of the following three days, which are sure to be intense ones for the Eagles as the Ravens come to town for joint practices.

"I think whenever you go against a different team, I think the level of competition ramps up a bit," Jenkins said. "We will probably go to a traditional huddle, and go to what a normal NFL practice looks like. Which would be a little bit of a break for us to actually huddle up."

That confidence is evident across the roster, with both offensive and defensive players excited to go up against players on a different team for just the second time.

"We are all professionals," Jenkins said. "We like to talk trash we like to compete. I don't think anybody here is going to back down from a challenge but we are out here to get better and to compete."

Several scrums have broken out across the league in joint practices, but Jenkins says the point of the sessions on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday is to get better, not to show off.

"We aren't here to see who's more macho or anything like that," he said.

"It's a joint practice, which we've been doing for the last couple years," another top Birds' defender, Fletcher Cox, said. "We know it's going to be a physical practice up front but you have to be smart about it."

"Schematically there are a few things I think our defense is excited to see."

Utley staying put?

Amaro says trade unlikely

Playing perhaps his best baseball since last spring, Chase Utley has been the topic of trade talks all across baseball. But the veteran has a no-trade clause, and, according to Phillies GM Ruben Amaro, it is "very likely" that Utley will remain with the team through the end of the season.

MLB Power Rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Cardinals (76-42)

With 76 wins, the Cardinals have nine more wins than any other team in the National League, as they now lead the NL Central by six games over the Pirates. They have been by far the most consistent team in the league this season.

No. 2

Royals (71-46)

The Royals are one of the hottest teams in the game as they have won eight of their last 10 games and now lead the AL Central by 12.5 games. Both their pitching and hitting have been clicking of late, as their plus-77 run differential is second-best in the American League.

No. 3

Pirates (69-47)

Pittsburgh continues to play well — winning seven of its last 10 games to take a firm grip at the top of the National League's wild-card race. Center fielder Andrew McCutchen's 77 RBI are tied for the fourth most in the National League and help pace the Pirates' offensive attack.

No. 4

Cubs (67-49)

After winning nine straight, the Cubs finally dropped a game. Chicago and the Pirates are the leaders of the NL wild-card race, so it appears the NL Central has a good chance of having three playoff teams. Jake Arrieta continues to impress with his 14 wins and 2.39 ERA.

No. 5

Dodgers (67-51)

Winners of three straight, the Dodgers have opened up a three-game lead in the NL West over the Giants. They are obviously led by their rotation, but Adrian Gonzalez is having a good year at the plate with 73 RBI.

No. 6

Yankees (65-52)

The Yankees were cooled off by the Blue Jays on Sunday, but New York still leads the AL East by a game. The team continues to be led by Mark Teixeira, as he's hit 31 home runs and driven in 79 runs, both in the top five in the AL.

No. 7

Blue Jays (65-54)

One of the hottest teams in baseball, the Blue Jays are making a run at the AL East crown. After making a few deals at the trade deadline, fans are excited and have been selling out games at the Rogers Centre. Although they trail the Yankees by a game, they're three up in the wild card.

No. 8

Giants (64-54)

The Giants are hanging on in the NL West race, as they trail the Dodgers by just three games. Their best chance of making the postseason might be winning the division, as the Cubs and Pirates seem to be running away with the wild card.

No. 9

Astros (56-49)

The Astros haven't played that well of late, but it's been good enough to stay atop the AL West standings. With Dallas Keutchel and Scott Kazmir at the top of its rotation, Houston should be in good shape for the postseason.

Franco to DL

Phillies place rookie Franco on disabled list

Just when you thought the Phillies could have their first rookie of the year in a decade (Ryan Howard won it in 2005), Maikel Franco's case to win the award took a big hit Tuesday when he was placed on the DL in the aftermath of his hit-by-pitch on the wrist last week.

Franco was not only dazzling with his glove but also was hitting .277 with 13 homers and 48 RBI. By every statistical measure, he was likely to finish the season in the top five in Rookie of the Year voting if he kept his production at the same rate for the rest of the season.

Franco's injury will likely allow Chase Utley to get more regular playing time. He was replaced on the Phillies' roster by infielder Aaron Altherr. His 15-day DL stint is retroactive to Aug. 12.

Finding consistency will be key for Owls as 2015 season nears

The Owls will return in 2015 with several highly touted upperclassmen like Tyler Matakevich leading the way. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"The biggest thing is you don't worry about your opponent. Focus on yourselves. Focus on the team. I think after that first game everyone takes a deep breath. But you can never let up in football."

Tyler Matakevich

High up in the football book of cliches, next to "On any given day any team can beat any other team," is this:

"It doesn't matter who the opponent. We just need to worry about ourselves."

That's the one Matt Rhule has been preaching since Temple finished 6-6 in 2014, without a bowl invitation. His message is that no matter what happens in their highly anticipated Sept. 5 opener against Penn State at the Linc, it's just the first game. The ones that follow are no more or less important.

"I'm trying to get them to understand it's not about who we play," Rhule said this past weekend. "It's about us. Two years ago we played decent — but not good — at Notre Dame, then came back the next week and Houston ran all over us. Last year [we] went out and beat Vanderbilt and played well, then gave up 512 yards on offense to Navy.

"So it's not everyone else. It's about us being the same team every week, which we clearly have not been."

Gradually, the message seems to be sinking in.

"It's been a problem Temple has faced over the years," said senior linebacker Tyler Matakevich, a fourth-team preseason All-American. "Coach has addressed it to us and guys are finally starting to realize it. ... Definitely we're not gonna let that happen this year."

Easier said than done, of course. But if the Owls can maintain some consistency they have a great chance of their first winning season since 2011 under Steve Addazio. Picked third in the American Athletic Conference, with 19 starters returning, 10 from a defense than allowed a fourth-best in the nation 17.5 points a game, Temple seems poised for a breakout year.

"We can do a lot better than last year," linebacker Nate D. Smith said. "A lot of games we beat ourselves, but this is a new year.

Three of Temple's losses last year were by eight points or less, including 13-10 to eventual AAC champ Memphis on a field goal at the gun.

If the offense, led by junior P.J. Walker, can find the end zone more frequently, it wouldn't hurt. Walker needs to improve upon his 53 percent completion rate, which included more interceptions (15) than touchdowns (13). The Owls running game led by Jahad Thomas (384 yards on 80 carries) should be boosted by the return of Zaire Williams, who gained 533 yards as a freshman but was hurt much of last year.

The bottom line is the pieces are there for Temple to finally start performing at the level Rhule and others expect. But with their rugged schedule — a trip to preseason AAC champ Cincinnati following Penn State, other road games at East Carolina and SMU and that highly anticipated game with Notre Dame on Halloween at the Linc — the Owls figure to be tested early and often.

Then again, if they just worry about themselves, things should work out fine. After all, that's what it says right near the top in the book of cliches.
